

TIME

MERKEL'S PROMISE

Germany is still the last best hope for Syrian refugees

By Aryn Baker

PHILIPPINES P170.00 U.S. ARMED FORCES US$ 7.00
MALAYSIA RM 14.00 SINGAPORE S$10.00
INDONESIA Rp 46,000

2 | Conversation
4 | For the Record

The Brief

News from the U.S. and around the world

5 | Treasury boss Steve Mnuchin tries to sell tax reform

9 | Ian Bremmer: Despite Merkel's win, populism is alive and kicking in Europe

10 | An unprecedented gerrymandering case reaches the Supreme Court

12 | A vote for independence in the Iraqi region of Kurdistan

The View

Ideas, opinion, innovations

17 | Mexico is more prepared for earthquakes than the U.S.

19 | Why airlines won't stub out ashtrays on planes

19 | Swiss drones ferry lab samples, taking medical care to new heights

20 | Norman Pearlstine on why Seoul is worried about President Trump's misreading of North Korea

21 | Eddie S. Glaude Jr. on the debate over free speech on campuses

The Features

So Close, So Far

A Syrian family TIME is following as part of the yearlong multimedia series Finding Home finally makes it to Germany—only to face further challenges
By Aryn Baker 22

Offensive Coordinator

President Trump's attack on NFL activists comes straight out of his well-worn playbook
By Alex Altman and Sean Gregory 28

After the Storm

Puerto Rico was devastated by Hurricane Maria and then fell off the White House agenda
By Karl Vick 36

Time Off

What to watch, read, see and do

43 | HBO's The Deuce is masterful

46 | Tom Cruise stars in American Made

48 | The lost art of utopian fiction

50 | Lady Gaga's new doc; Quick Talk with Demi Lovato

51 | Kristin van Ogtrop gets to know her sons better through a shared digital music library

52 | 9 Questions for former Reddit CEO Ellen Pao

▲ Mohannad Abazli holds daughter Heln on her first birthday, celebrated in a refugee camp in Kusel, Germany, on Sept. 13

ON THE COVER AND ABOVE: Photograph by Lynsey Addario—Verbatim for TIME